Steps 1. Drag layers Open up an image and draw a new layer on it. The layers below will all be added to this image. You can use any tool. You can also use drawing tools to create layers. Use the squares with overlapping select-boxes to select areas that you would like to erase. A layer's default action is to be added to another layer. A few things are different about layers: Layers are always on top of each other. When using the Erase Tool, you'll erase the highlighted areas, not the layer below. A layer can be blurred, and the image's color values are changed. 2. Add and remove filters This is a relatively easy operation. Simply click the layer in the Layers Panel to make it active. With the Erase Tool, select the box, and press Alt + Delete. You can use any filter you want, but here are some tips for using them: Filters are applied on a layer. If you want to apply a filter to all your layers, put a layer over all the others and have it cover them completely. With a layer active, the filter can be applied by clicking the layer name in the Layers Panel. You can also apply filters by clicking the filter in the Filter Gallery. To remove a filter from an active layer, you can use the keyboard shortcuts Alt + Delete, or you can find your filter in the Filter Gallery, and click it to remove it. Here are some of the most popular filters: The Black and White filter turns the image black and white. The Sepia filter is for turning the image sepia-tone, which gives it a brownish tone. The Colorize filter takes the image to a different color. The Posterize filter turns the image into a posterized version of it. The High Pass filter reduces the image's detail. The Roll filter turns the image into a 3D-type effect. The Halftone filter turns the image into a grayscale effect. 3. Sharpen and reduce the noise The Sharpen filter will add some grain to the image. You can click the Sharpen tool to add a Grain effect to the image. The Detail slider allows you to adjust the amount of grain.

Pages Tuesday, November 27, 2014 But, she was so cute! (we all know that) So, my cousin messaged me and said she found this adorable little, tiger/turtle themed dress online, and she was trying to get it for $10. Well, I had to oblige and was so, so, so excited to get it for the $10! (Fingers crossed, it is still there for the $10) Here is the outfit! My friends and I took her to the zoo for the first time, and that was the main reason she wanted the dress; it was a little dress, and it was cute and she wanted to wear it. This picture was taken before the dress was wrapped. When we got back she opened it up and it said "thank you" to her from Animal World Zoo. I love this little "Hello!" We were able to get an amazing photo of "Cousin" with the "dress" on. She was such a hit with all of the animals! We were able to see two tigers, a snake, a turtle, and we got to feed the giraffes!! When we got home it was getting dark and she wanted her camera taken. So, we just took this photo. She didn't want to take it off. So, we had to snap a selfie! I am finally back from my week in Wisconsin and not only have I been gone for a week, but I have been gone with the flu. I'm still recuperating (and very happy to be home and able to cook). Anyways, I have some blog posts lined up for you! First, we have a dress that I just love and it's out of the ordinary! And, as a random blog post, I will tell you more about my summer trip to Wisconsin than the "news" I just mentioned. I'm excited to share with you!!! Check out the rest of the blog posts tomorrow!! Alexa Curle Hi, my name is Curlee I am married to my best friend and I am a mother to a wonderful 10-year-old boy (with Autism) and a princess (with Cerebral Palsy). I love my family, knitting, and blogging. I am also a registered dental assistant. I love the sun, my huskies, cooking, traveling, and, of course, my 2 boys! I am always open to recommendations.

This application claims the benefit of Korean Patent Application No. 2003-5305, filed on Jan. 23, 2003, in the Korean Intellectual Property Office, the disclosure of which is incorporated herein by reference. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a turbo molecule actuator, a thermomolecular machine, and a method for manufacturing the same, and more particularly, to a turbo molecule actuator using a turbo molecule generated from a molecular beam, a thermomolecular machine including the turbo molecule actuator, and a method for manufacturing the turbo molecule actuator. 2. Description of the Related Art A large variety of micro actuators have been developed in recent years. In particular, micro electromechanical systems (MEMS) have been introduced into many fields in the world, and extensive research and study have been conducted to develop a microminiaturized actuator. Such a microminiaturized actuator is useful for all fields and includes many fields. A so-called 'optical actuator' also belongs to a field of such microminiaturized actuators. This optical actuator is a combination of a micro mechanical structure and a micro optical structure. This micro mechanical structure must be able to operate while maintaining characteristics superior to those of prior art microminiaturized mechanical structures. In particular, in such a field of optical actuators, the characteristics of the micro mechanical structure used therein must be designed to control the optical properties, but the technology of the micro mechanical structure is still being developed. A heat actuator belongs to another field of microminiaturized actuators. The heat actuator is the representative of microminiaturized actuators and is being developed as a more advanced actuator. The heat actuator is used to generate motion in a minute amount of energy. A micro heat actuator is similar to a micro mechanical structure in that it uses a micro mechanical structure having a minute size, and is a heat actuator for generating heat. In addition, in a field of heat actuators, a micro electrical circuit, which is required for signal transmission, must be provided. In such a field of heat actuators, like a case of the optical actuator, the technology of the micro mechanical structure used therein must be designed to control the optical properties thereof. The techniques for applying a micro mechanical structure to a micro optical actuator for improving the optical properties are disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 6,283,0
